About dotmatics

The company was formed in 2005 as a result of a spin-off from the research informatics department from Merck Sharp and Dohme, Terlings Park, UK. Dotmatics is privately owned, already profitable and rapidly growing in size.

By enabling discovery organizations to share and use their research information more efficiently, the company's aims are to facilitate the generation of strategic knowledge, making the right information available to the right person, at the right time and to boost customers' productivity by maximizing their information and knowledge awareness across the spectrum of their discovery activities.

Some product highlights:

browser is a web-based tool for querying and browsing small and large biological and chemical datasets. browser integrates with document management systems (including gateway) and in-house tools to extend its retrieval capabilities to both structured and unstructured information.

gateway serves as a central place for all project teams throughout your organisation to share information. Gateway also securely enables internal research teams to share information with external partners.

pinpoint is a powerful Oracle chemical cartridge for querying and integrating chemical databases*. Pinpoint represents world-class indexing and search performance at a cost-effective price.

The company has a number of licensing agreements with international pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies including Merck & Co., J&J PRD and UCB.

Dotmatics also works with its licensing partners to also provide professional services alongside its solution set in order to integrate its web-based products within a company's existing environment.

* Developed in collaboration with Astex Therapeutics.
